The month of May was no exception to the trend observed in 2025, marked by high market volatility and numerous political twists and turns. Fortunately, equity markets posted positive performances, driven in part by a renewed appetite for risk among investors. The various announcements of trade talks between the USA and several international partners with a view to concluding agreements helped to restore confidence. The release of corporate results for the first quarter of 2025 was another supportive factor. On the political front, Republicans managed to push through President Trump's "Big Beautiful Bill" after intense last-minute negotiations. This did not do the market much good, as the proposed plan appears to be far more deficit-laden than had been announced in March, the Senate now will have to review and vote for this plan. On May 28, the Court of International Trade ruled that the tariffs introduced by the President were illegal, which triggered a brief jump in the markets, because the very next day, the Court of Appeals overturned this decision, validating the President's measures. To this day, the tariffs remain in force. On the macroeconomic front, US data did not deteriorate to the point of worrying the market. Inflation continued to fall, reaching 2.3% year-on-year, easing fears of price hikes linked to high taxes. Employment figures were better than expected, both in terms of job creation and the unemployment rate, which remains at 4.2%. So, for the time being, the US economy does not seem to be deteriorating. In Europe, too, the economy has not deteriorated, and disinflation is on course. With the economy far from overheating and inflation levels close to the ECB's targets, Mrs. Lagarde will have no excuse not to cut rates, which is what the market is expecting. In the US, Mr. Powell is waiting for more data on the impact of the tariffs in place, so we should not see any rate cuts. The earnings season is now almost over. Analysts were too pessimistic in their expectations. While they were expecting 7.2% EPS growth for Q1 from S&P 500 companies, the actual growth was 13.3%. For the Stoxx 600, expected growth was -1.5%, while actual growth was 2.5%. This difference between forecasts and actual figures has supported the markets after the April correction.

In this environment, the Weissshorn Balanced fund gained 2.62%, bringing its YTD performance to +5.50%.

Although the Bond pocket had a positive contribution (+25 bps), most of the performance came from the Equity side (+207 bps). Our exposure to European Small & Mid Cap and our exposure to growth sectors through the MegaTrends fund (+9.6%) were among the main contributors. Once again, Leonardo took the lead, contributing 50 bps on its own. The stock is up 109% since the beginning of the year. For once, Gold contributed negatively (-4 bps) amid renewed Investors' confidence that negotiations on US tariffs will result in the cancellation of a significant portion of them. The upward trend remains intact on the yellow metal. Amber Capital's activist fund, which is part of our Alternatives pocket, gained more than 6.15% over the month thanks to strong gains in two companies it has held for a long time, what generated a contribution of +24 bps. We made two reallocations during the month. First, we decided to switch our US Small & Mid Cap exposure to the same European segment. We believe that the upside potential is much greater and valuations are significantly more attractive on the Old Continent. We have also decided to exit our Vietnam theme, which we have held for more than four years and on which we have made a significant profit. The proceeds from the sale have been allocated to a Nikkei ETF. In the current environment, we believe that Japanese companies have a strong hand to play and are trading at relatively low valuations. As the deadline for the suspension of tariffs approaches, we remain cautious about the markets, given that no concrete agreement has yet been reached between the US and its trading partners.
