Rating Breakdown

The month of May was no exception to the trend observed in 2025, marked by high market volatility and numerous political developments. Fortunately, equity markets posted positive performances, driven in part by a renewed appetite for risk among investors. The various announcements of trade talks between the USA and several international partners with a view to concluding agreements helped restore confidence. The release of corporate results for the first quarter of 2025 was another supportive factor.

On the political front, Republicans managed to push through President Trump's "Big Beautiful Bill" after intense last-minute negotiations. This did not do the market much good, as the proposed plan appears to be far more deficit-laden than had been announced in March, the Senate will now have to review and vote on this plan. On May 28, the Court of International Trade ruled that the tariffs introduced by the President were illegal, triggering a brief market jump. However, the very next day, the Court of Appeals overturned this decision, validating the President's measures. To this day, the tariffs remain in force.

On the macroeconomic front, US data did not deteriorate to the point of worrying the market. Inflation continued to fall, reaching 2.3% year-over-year, easing fears of price hikes linked to high taxes. Employment figures were better than expected, both in terms of job creation and the unemployment rate, which remains at 4.2%. For the time being, the US economy does not seem to be deteriorating. In Europe, too, the economy has not deteriorated, and disinflation is on course. With the economy far from overheating and inflation levels close to the ECB's targets, Mrs. Lagarde will have no excuse not to cut rates, which is what the market is expecting. In the US, Mr. Powell is awaiting more data on the impact of the tariffs in place, so we should not see any rate cuts.

The earnings season is now almost over. Analysts were too pessimistic in their expectations. While they were expecting 7.2% EPS growth for Q1 from S&P 500 companies, the actual growth was 13.3%. For the Stoxx 600, expected growth was -1.5%, while actual growth was 2.5%. This difference between forecasts and actual figures has supported the markets after the April correction.

In this environment, the Weisshorn Global Bonds fund appreciated by 0.48% in May, bringing its YTD performance to +1.15%.

Despite the rise in rates, our IG pocket contributed positively to performance (+28 bps). While US rates rose (+23 bps for the US 10-year yield and +29 bps for the US 2-year yield), German rates remained stable. US Investors are expecting inflationary pressures to increase due to the tariffs. The decision in recent months to reduce US duration and increase it in Europe has therefore paid off. To date, the portfolio's duration stands at 5.4, with Europe contributing more than 80%. After a brief spike in April, Credit Spreads continued to narrow, which also contributed positively to performance (+13 bps). Nearly one-third of this contribution came from a Pemex 2029 issue in Euros, which rose 4.9%. A few minor reallocations took place during the month. Due to the number of economic uncertainties, there is no strong commitment to a scenario. Will inflation pick up? There is no conviction yet, because it could be tamed by lower economic growth. 5% on the UST 10-year cannot be ruled out. The duration of the fund remains at 5.4. Opportunities to increase it will materialize in the coming months.
